Starting on November 3, Monmouth University will continue with the third annual Family Weekend. Family Weekend is an event held at Monmouth University for students and families not only the gorgeous fountains or spotless dorms, but also where they are furthering their dreams. “I’m excited to show them,” says Maria Webster, Head of Admissions.

Festivities Planned for Family Weekend

“...we have a large turnout at our events and families tell us they enjoy the program.”

SHANNON KILLEN
Director of Judicial Affairs & Special Projects

To get spend to time with their families, students are offered a wide range of activities. The Family Weekend is the perfect time to get together as a family and spend time with each other.

The event is open to various local high school students, Monmouth faculty and staff, and the community as well.

Shannon Killeen, Executive Director of the Two River Film Festival at Monmouth University, said that this event, “...an opportunity for the university, the film festival, and the community to come together and show films and symposia to bring together dialogue for importance.”

“We must make sure warnings are heard and responded to,” Al Gore reported about global warming and its potential devastating affect on our world.

On Wednesday, October 25, a viewing of An Inconvenient Truth (2006) was shown in Pollak Theatre. The film, a documentary about Gore’s movement to make the concern about global warming a recognized crisis world-wide, has made a huge impact on its audience.

In 1936, Winston Churchill said we are currently in a “period of consequence.” His words ring true, as global warming doesn’t only affect our environment, but is also a catalyst for natural disasters such as Hurricanes Ivan, Dean, and Katrina.

Typhoons in Japan are also on the rise due to this mounting predicament as well as emerging diseases such as the West Nile Virus and SARS Agri- culture and forestry along with agriculture and forestry along with natural resources and terrestrial ecosystems are also at risk.

We all know global warming is a highly worrisome problem, but there are countless amounts of information out there about this topic. Quoting Mark Twain, he says, “It ain’t what we don’t know that gets us in trouble. It’s what we know for sure that just ain’t so.”

As the sun’s warmth beams down onto Earth, the sun’s warmth beams down onto Earth, the ozone layer reflects off into the atmosphere. It’s the other 10 percent that becomes hazardous in the atmosphere. One way to reflect Earth due to a thickened layer of pol- lution and greenhouse gases in the at- mosphere. Since heat is trapped, gla- ciers melt into the oceans and storms grow stronger because of the warmer water.

This alarming trend is only becoming more pertinent with time. According to the Earth Times Web site, www.earthtimes.org, 2005 was recorded as the hottest of all-time. “At this point, people shouldn’t be surprised this is happening,” said Da- vid Rind, a Goddard Institute climate -tologist... “should we be surprised? We’re putting a lot more carbon di- oxide into the atmosphere, and we’re getting a lot higher temperatures.”

Footage of Greenland and the Ad- jacent ice caps in the world with comparable photos from the 1980s to present day. The glaciers were more distinct back then, as opposed to today when they are barely visible. Students were especially affected when the film showed a hypothetical, yet extremely explicit portrayal of the ocean water rushing through the streets of New York City.

“I was stunned,” one student said. “Watching what could possibly hap- pen is outrageous. I can’t believe what could happen if we don’t help the problem right now.”

Another student commented, “It seems that we should all do at least one thing a day to reduce the threat of global warming. We can’t do it alone, we must all contribute. Small things add up.”

With elaborate graphs, photos, and video footage of the urgent infor- mation of the ordi- nance, the New Jersey Municipal Law Against Discrimina- tion, the New Jersey Municipal Law Against Discrimina- tion, it too was challenged. In Ocean Township proposed an identical ordinance. After its ratification, it was immediately rescinded. The ordinance was then reintroduced, but my hands are kind of tied at this point. I can’t do anything about it. It’s what you know for sure that just ain’t so.”

Office Renovations Completed for Performing Arts

NICOLE PELICIO CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Vaune Peck’s office, which is normally located in Pollak Theater, was temporarily moved into The Outlook’s office in the Plan-gere Center during the summer months so that renovations could take place.

When repairs were first planned for Peck’s Performing Arts office, she did not expect the overhaul to take more than a month or so. She also didn’t expect that, in the meantime, she would be placed in another functioning office. In fact, she did not even have knowledge about where her temporary office would be. And neither did The Outlook’s staff.

“It creates negative things that happen between departments that aren’t necessary,” said Peck. “For instance, when we first moved into The Outlook, there were a few feathers ruffled about it. Number one, we were told, ‘You’re moving over to The Outlook office tomorrow.’ So we had to pack up 14 months so that renovations could take place.

Evidently the of term in the first floor of Plangere Center during the summer was temporarily moved into back classrooms and the back of theater to renovate were those of the Student Activities Department. For Peck, this meant that they were out of their stay, Peck and her fellow teacher were on their own. They had to spread out in the conference room, making it somewhat difficult for Peck to perform daily tasks.

“The only detriment to having the Performing Arts Series Department in our office was that our e-board couldn’t have its weekly meetings because our conference room was occupied and the table wasn’t functional,” said Peck. “Our consulting computers and supplies,” said Samantha Young, co-editor in chief at The Outlook. “Jacqueline and I and the other editors tried to have individual meetings without editors, but that just didn’t work as well. Even though two completely different offices were functioning in the same space for a short period of time, there were no hard feelings about having to work, tour, perform, and the renovations didn’t stop or seriously hinder those jobs. I think all of the Outlook staff had an experience to witness how the students create the newspaper.

Throughout the construction, Peck and the students learned about how The Outlook happens. And I think it was a huge advantage to have a little insight into how the Perform-ring and ships to perform daily tasks.

said that the event’s planners had decided it would be best not to try to compete with other events on campus, as that might have a detrimental effect on the symposium attendance.

Dr. Swanson says that the MACE symposium will be held next September, and the event’s planners would make sure that the Communication Council would book a solid lineup of speakers. When asked about the future of the MACE, Dr. Swanson said, “We’re working on some things. Maybe we’ll even do a couple of MACE awards this year.” The theme for this year’s award and symposium was selected by the Communication Council and thereby, said Swanson, was given to the most respected group of jour-

Plangere was selected to win the award due to his committion to his role as the chairman of the New Jersey Press Association, he is also a member of the Gridiron Club, the oldest and arguably most respected group of journalists in Washington. It’s a job that he would love to do.

Dr. Swanson promises that next years MACE symposium will take place as scheduled and will be more widely publicized than the event this year. More information about previous MACE winners can be found online at Monmouth University’s Web site, www.monmouth.edu.

MASTERING THE ART OF TEACHING
Sheila Wycinowski, Director of Curriculum and Staff Development at Amity High School, explains, "Basically we look to hire Quinnipiac students. They have a clear understanding of lesson planning and classroom management and the balance between them." She also characterizes Quinnipiac students as articulate, creative, able to encourage higher-level thinking in students, and able to incorporate technology into their teaching.

RAVE REVIEWS FOR OUR MBA
The Quinnipiac University School of Business MBA program continues to prepare business professionals for the realities of management in global, technology-driven work environments in specializations such as:

This week, I’d like to switch gears a little bit. As co-editor in-chief of this year’s Outlook, I would like to flex some proverbial muscle on an issue permeating our Opinion section this week. I may or may not know— and I don’t know why you would unless you affiliated with any sort of publication— an editor’s main job is to oversee the way in which a paper functions, to communicate with his or her writers and encourage them to do their best. Another job of an editor, arguably the most important, only shows its face when trouble strikes. It is at this juncture that an editor must take a stand. Any good editor will stand behind his or her writers and their actions, and place his or her reputation and credibility on the line. Not all editors are good, but I like to think they are the minority.

Why the reason for all this talk about writers and controversy? Well, because we had a scuffle come across The Outlook office as of late, and I thought it my duty to diffuse the situation as best I can while voicing my opinions.

The Opinion section. A place for students to express themselves or their feelings about anything happening on Monmouth’s campus. It is a rain check. As you say anything. However, there is also a downside to contributions by students placed in the section. That is, other people will see it. It should come as no surprise to any-one reading this column or any part of The Outlook, for that matter, that others will see your words.

As a result, if students feel so inclined, they are able to respond to what gets published— thinking, in an articulate manner, their thoughts on the same issue. Perhaps, an advocate to the community courtesy of Professor Tiefie. The word “opinion” is most commonly and incorrectly defined as what one person or group of people think. While this is true, it does not encompass all that the meaning entails. The root of the word is “opine” — to think something over with great care. The application of this little English lesson is simply this: write about what you want, how you want, in whichever way you choose. It is your right as a student matriculating in this University. Counterintuitively, if you decide to express your thoughts in what can only be labeled as a quick, sum-up manner, expect a response.

This message applies particularly to one female student. Not too long ago, our Opinion Editor took a gander at the box to your left and got her name published in a Chinese quote in broken English. After it was published, the editor received an email from said student scolding her for its use.

To answer some of the questions this particular student had about the manner in which the paper is run, let me ask her mind: yes, both myself and Jacqueline knew what was on the page. And yes, I did allow my editors to have a great amount of respect for the work all of our editors put in every week. Yes, they have free range over their sections. But whenever an opinion piece is submitted, we all sit together and talk it out. This quote can be seen on page eight of this issue and simply means, if you want your whole life for something that happens, it’ll never happen. That’s all. A simple axiom for those who believe luck and good fortune will find them.

In its most basic form, it is a lesson. But, you’re sitting or standing there and asking yourself, “What is the big problem?” Why is she devoting her entire editorial section to this one outcry from a reader?

This is why. Upon receiving an angry email, the editor of the section responded with the utmost respect for placing the quote as she did. Thinking it was over, we all got on with our lives here at The Outlook. Another issue had to be put out. Did it stop there? Of course not (and to tell you the truth, if you thought I was done with this epic tale you were mis-sold). This message applies to you the reader. After all, the whole point of an opinion section is to make people think. It’s not something you get to do everyday, commented junior Ashley M. Sophonios. OP/ED

Some students feel that the college years are just for having a good time. Having an apartment off-campus and sometimes partying, meeting new people, and true love in college ’cause by the time you graduate your relationship is over. Believe me, it’s not what the media talks about in the news. It’s more like,”It depends on how you feel, is it real or not?”

I think college relationships are worth it ‘cause this is the time to find the love of your life, who were worth it ‘cause this is the time to find the love of your life, who are willing to be devoted and truly care for each other. John & Mike are a sophomore and a senior and they are in an intimate relationship. My mother was 16, so I guess it could work.”

“Do you play a sport?”, “What do you play?”, “So what sport should not have to respond to questions like “So what sport do you play?”?”

Maybe that’s why most people have a different answer when you ask them why we’re in Iraq. Some say 1961 farewell address. In the same convoluted conversation.

We are American can be very cruel people. We are, after all, a nation that promotes violence in the media, turns a blind eye to the inhume treatment of animals, and still hold deep prejudices against certain races and religions. But we have never been this cruel. Medical ethics have become corrupted because physicians and military personnel are directly and indirectly not doing enough to serve the best interests of the patients. There was a time for blood for 9/11, and Iraq was supposed to help the Islam world. However, as time passed, the “average” citizen felt betrayed and deceived by the government. Was our patriotism actually exploited?

I think I might be a little naive about this whole mess (and make no mistake about it, right or wrong, the war is a mess). I don’t believe for one minute that Bush is the “devil” or that he can’t care about the American lives that are being lost daily, as some of his critics continue to demand. I want to see a transformed world: a world free from terrorism. Even though there was no direct link between Saddam and 9/11, perhaps the history books will show that toppling the dictator was the way to go; a pre emptive strike on the citizens and emotionally abused due to the interrogation techniques of our military. The military personnel stationed there choose to ignore it.

In 2003, the Pentagon reported that there were 350 acts of self-Guantanamo Bay over a given year. Consequently, this decreased the amount of information gathered by interrogating Guantanamo prisoners and, in response, a team of medical professionals were brought in to handle the situation. And boy, did we handle it. Priscilla may have reduced some, but we decided to ignore medical ethics and the standard of care and to use aggressive techniques to pérditive of torture of these prisoners!

According to Leonard Rubenstein, Executive Director of Physicians for Human Rights, interrogators in Guantanamo Bay tortured the prisoners to make them say things and sign off on torture and monitor sleep, sensory, and food deprivations, and inform interrogators of physical vulnerabilities in detain- ees to exploit in future sessions.

Instead of facilitating the detainees back to health, but only that they can be put through the same process again.

Psychologically, doctors believe interrogations behind two-way mirrors and advise interrogators how to be more emotionally effective, coach interrogators on anger management and self-control, and mediate the interaction between the detainees and interrogators in order to expose the prisoners’ weaknesses, according to Gerald Koocher, the President of the American Psychological Association.

And it doesn’t end there. Our medical personnel fail to report evidence of torture, fail to intervene to stop it being repeated, and fail to report torture and monitor sleep, sensory, and food deprivations, and inform interrogators of physical vulnerabilities in detainees to exploit in future sessions. Our doctors facilitate the prisoners back to health, but only so that they can be put through the same process again.

Why Do We Fight?

Do you think that college relationships are worth it? If you think so, why? If you think not, why not? Some students feel that the college years are just for having a good time. Having an apartment off-campus and sometimes partying, meeting new people, and true love in college ’cause by the time you graduate your relationship is over.

In fact, Donald Rumsfeld is shown back in the day. Cheney, of course, claimed that Saddam was responsible for terrorists. Even though there were “buddies” at one point. Saddam Hussein in a clip that I watch for shareholders more than its belief was from the 1980s. The phrase centered on his role in the 9/11, and Iraq was supposed to help the Islam world. A Lack of Diversity at Monmouth University Explored plenty of mainstream organizations to pick from there are only two recognized minority organizations. These two organizations try their best to hold events and be a valuable part of campus life. They are often met with rules and regulations from the Greek advisor who by his own admission knows very little about minority Greek life. When dealing with the idea of bringing more organizations on campus our current Greek advisor feels that one fraternity or sorority here but as any other. Not only has he been given the proper chance to take part in campus life!

However this issue is so much bigger than just color and race. Every aspect of this University is a constant reminder that Monmouth DOES NOT WANT TO CHANGE. The radio station has refused to change its format from “hard core rock with an edge” to something more suitable for the students. Why does the radio station that my tuition helps pay for play music that only small percentage of students even listen to, and while I have nothing against the men and women who work hard to run the station, I do frown upon the fact that they refuse to fight against the ways of the past and change the format. If you are offended by that then you should be because you are standing in the way of change.

I hope that the goal of the administration is not to maximize income and not use the proper funds for important concerns such as professors. This could disable students from graduating on time. What we need is a forum with the student body as well as faculty and administrative heads. We should be allowed to talk face to face and ask the decision makers to support their decisions verbally and in public. The students should be in control of school funds being allocated and why. It is very important for us to understand exactly were our money goes and how it is used. It is time to hold the administration accountable, for they have no problem accepting the credit for our championships and our overall success.

The All-American Rejects Speak Out

M: Personally love touring and so the more we’re out, the more I have stuff to do. So, it’s nice I like it. And you know, you can never tour enough. You know in the eyes of people who you know whose chief job is to make sure you have things to do.

O: The next tour has a lot of different artists on it, who are you most looking forward to performing with?

C: Motion City Soundtrack, I think it would be cute. Because, Motion City. They’re like our brother band. They are some of the first bands we stoked to get to play with them like hanging out on the road.

M: What’s the best band you have toured with?

C: Motion City Soundtrack

M: I’ve definitely seen that band play more than any band ever, and I’m never sick of them.

O: Is there any band you guys have met on the road and they have a sound that you thought they would be?

M: Yeah, there’s a band called Caylee. We’ve been along with them very well.

O: I wasn’t present at this moment but I don’t know much about that so.

M: It was a long time ago. That was our first tours and it didn’t go over so well. But, you know, whatever.

O: “Swing Swing” was kind of like a hit single kind of start- ed everything. Did you guys expect to have that kind of welcom- eme from the fans everywhere?

M: It was definitely a surprise at how big it got and how quickly it got that big. Yeah, everything was a real surprise. You know, you never really expect things to take off, at least for us like we came out of nowhere, you know, we thought for all we knew no one remembered who we were and we would have fanbase. And now it’s doing better than the first, so we’re stoked.

O: What are you thinking marketing for the next single? Because it was about a year, it was two years between both albums. Were you the best friend we’ve been one-hit wonder, not even, because ‘Paper Heart’, was good too.

M: We were just hoping for a mildly successful tour after we recorded the record, was the main thing we were hoping for. That probably people knew who we were in every city at that point in time, ya know?

M: Seriously, we got done recording, we hopped in a van and went out, and it’s still like sixteen years ago, we’re still young and out. And so we’re kind of like, we haven’t done anything in forever, and we haven’t put out a new record yet. And you know, no one is going to come see us. But it turned out to be really cool. And, like, you shocked us that we have still had a fanbase.

O: What have you noticed about the industry now that you guys have become famous and that this album has been such a success? Does it treat you differently at all?

C: There is tons more a kiss. And it got that big. Yeah, everything is like your big hit that kind of starts.

M: Prince did that once.

C: Yeah, little known story about that guy.

M: But ya know, I don’t know. Things have definitely changed since we first started getting popular. Like, the Internet is easy, way a bigger tool and crutch at the same time than it was three years ago. So, I haven’t really gotta learn to deal with that. Everything’s shifting right now. It’s a really long period for the music industry.

O: What about making videos for your guys? How’s that different?

M: Do you have a lot of control when you make the videos?

C: We come into play really on the first video we did. But the second video, and then we’ll give editing notes back to the director to kind of watch what we do with the video, and then we’ll give editing notes back to the director to kind of change things the way we want. That seems to be the biggest point we do in videos.

M: We definitely have, like the first record, the first video we did was really cool and like we were cool, and we were like cool, you know? Like, we didn’t really do it when we first did our videos, then it turned out cool and so, like, awesome! Then we did two more videos and we had that same outlook and approach, and they kind of went well. (Bad). So, for this record, I think we definitely made a very conscious effort to make sure our videos are good and that we have a day, they are running out of food and supplies for the people. The New Jersey Community Water Watch is teaming up with Interest Research Group, America’s National Service, and college campuses across the state to help out these families for the holiday season, with a mission of collecting over 70 boxes.

Donations can be made outside of local groceries - Pathmark in Eatontown, Shoprite of Long Branch, and Shoprite of West Long Branch. Also, there will be boxes in the student center and at each department on campus.

For all those on campus who are involved, there will be a special meeting on Monday, December 4 at 6 pm. The dorm who donates the most food will have a pizza party. We are running out of pasta, rice, hygiene products, first aid kits, and infant care.
Hey everyone! I hope everyone had a blast at homecoming. I have to admit I was a little down on Saturday after being so excited to see my boyfriend, and our usual homecoming traditions.

So as this was in Athens, Greece on a Sunday afternoon, because our flight to Nice was delayed, Liz and Bridget are upstairs relaxing, and getting ready to head home to London. I’m sad to say that today marks the end of our ten day “holiday” – as they call it over here. However, before we got home from the beach, we get from school and each student gets a chance to decide what part of the world they’d like to see. The best advice I can give you for this trip is to plan in advance – in advance. By doing this, you can be organized and figure out who you are traveling with, where you are traveling to, and exactly what you want to see.

The prices for hostels and flights are much cheaper if you book them in advance. It took us about three weeks to plan and book our flights and booking in advance is the way to go. Even so, it was pretty nice and it was allowed to go in. I strongly suggest going here if you visit Italy. The paintings on the walls, the statues, and, most of all, the huge hole in the wall that allows the sun to shine in is all things that need to be seen in person to really convey the beauty of it.

We continued to walk around until we all admitted we were exhausted and headed back to the hostel. We began to get restless, so we went downstairs to see if the hostel had any playing cards available. We wound up having a lot of fun with some of the people staying there, as well as the staff. Liz, Bridget, and I stayed up pretty late with people from Brazil, Canada, and Italy playing the card game Spoons. That was probably one of the best nights I’ve had while traveling. I would never have imagined myself sitting in Italy getting to know many different cultures. I’ve been writing emails to all my family and friends about our experience. We were only on the first island for about two hours, but time seemed to pass by quickly. We had about two hours to spend there, but time seemed to fly. Soon, it was time to head back to the pier.

The cruise provided entertainment for us during the trip home. Bridget and I are both big on music and dancing, so we were both very happy to get back on a boat and see some new sights. A cruise is a great way to meet people and to see many different cultures all in one.

Now it’s time to pack up. Am I excited to be back in London? Yes and no. We are definitely exhausted, but heading back to school will be a good thing. We have about two weeks left, and already we have talked about how sad it makes us. With family and friends coming, there are both ups and downs.

I’m still processing all the places we traveled to and all of the sights. We were lucky enough to see. I hope each of you who have any interest in studying abroad are pursuing that interest and getting to the meetings. Although I could have easily been looking for another job to better actually to see it with your own eyes. No history class could ever really fully explain the history and meaning of history until you are actually there and can experience its true meaning at ruins of the ancient Greek civilization.

Finally, I head back to Amsterdam on Thursday with Jack, my boy friend, and then we actually are leaving on Wednesday. I almost forget there is a lot to see in London while I’m staying there. My email address is still eluca2600@yahoo.com, should you have any questions. I would love to help you guys out. See you next week!
Imagine studying in the coolest place on Earth.

Studying in Antarctica...just one of the real-world experiences from Montclair State.

Imagine traveling to some of the coolest places on Earth and getting involved in truly exciting research studies. As a graduate student in Montclair State’s College of Science and Mathematics, that’s exactly what could happen. You’ll find yourself developing new skills and insights as you take part in groundbreaking research projects across the globe in destinations like Antarctica, China, the Virgin Islands, even the Southern Patagonian Andes. Or you could be part of our remote sensing program with NASA, where new discoveries happen every day!

Some of the exciting programs in the College of Science and Mathematics include: BS/MS Aquatic and Coastal Science, MS Molecular Biology, Doctorate in Environmental Management, Ed.D in Pedagogy of Mathematics Education, MA in Teaching Middle Grades Mathematics, MS Computer Science and MS Mathematics.

In addition, our graduate school offers over 85 innovative, real-world learning opportunities plus a distinguished faculty. Each program is tailored to advance your career with new ideas, new thinking and new perspectives.

MTV U Rocks Roseland Ballroom

LISA PIKARD
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Last week, MTV U hosted their annual Woodie Awards at Rose- land Ballroom in New York City. Nominees and winners were se- lected by college students. The idea behind the “Woodie” award stems from awards received by independent bands that didn’t sell well enough for gold or plat- inum awards, but have a dedicated fanbase. The Woodie Awards are known for honoring musicians that are destined for bigger and better things. Fall Out Boy and The Kill- ers are previous recipients of these awards.

The show this year certainly initiated bands into the world of mainstream music.

First-time award show goers, The Plain White T’s, proved they are destined for greatness. “This is our first time at an award show at all!” exclaimed Dave Tirio, guitarist of The Plain White T’s. When referred to as famous on stars, Tom Higgenson, the band’s vocalist, laughed and said, “Wait, we’re stars?”

The band is down-to-earth and has no problem jok- ing around or making fun of them- selves, which shines through in their music. With a growing fan- base and nonchalant attitude, The men of the Plain White T’s are go- ing to be a force to reckon with in the music world.

Although the band never made it through college, they were more than appreciative of their award from college fans. This being the first award show they were ever invited to, going home with an award was an added bonus. The Plain White T’s received the “Breakout Woodie” for bands on starting to break into the music world. This may have been their first award show, but they came home with the first award, and it is definitely not their last. Look for The Plain White T’s to make a gi- antic splash in the music world in the coming months.

Another first-time event oc- curred this past Wednesday at the award show; O.A.R. (Of A Revo- lution) received their first award, as well. They couldn’t attend the event, but sent a video acceptance in. The award for the most streamed video online went to the band (MTV) didn’t know if we defi- nitely won; they were counting the votes, and it definitely looked like we were going to win. So, they sent us a video to film an acceptance speech, and we didn’t even know if we [had] won yet. I actually don’t remember. Now we don’t feel so silly about it.”

The band is quite happy to have received their first real award of this caliber.

Interestingly enough, the win- ning video, “Lay Down,” was shot for MTV U by students with a concept that came from the stu- dents. Benj commented, “We wanted to do something different from anything we had done pre- viously, and there was an oppor- tunity that arose from MTV U to have received the students get in- volved and put the video together as part of a documentary exhibi- ting what it actually takes to put a video together.” The assistance of the students certainly paid off in a big way for the band.

The Internet has been more than kind to O.A.R., not only for this streaming award, but also because they use it as an outlet for fans to trade live shows. O.A.R. is one of the few bands that use the Internet rather than-despite it.

Another big winner of the night was Angels and Airwaves. The band is fronted by ex-Blink-182 man Tom DeLonge. The band is also backed by the former drum- mer of The Offspring, Angels and Airwaves. As lighthearted and fun as his first album, Angels and Airwaves is a concept that came from the students.

Another big winner of the night included; Gnarls Barkley for Best Video (live action) Woodie, 30 Seconds to Mars for Best Video, and The Gorillaz for Best Video (animated). In order to catch the award show, check out the televi- sion in the dining hall or log on to www.mtvu.com on November 2 to see who else took home a Woodie, and to watch and download even- ts by breakout artists Gym Class Heroes and TV on the Radio, as well as music from veteran Beck, who provided a truly original per- formance. Enjoy the show!
Hollywood Happenings

KRISTEN RENDA
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

There is very sad news this week in Hollywood. Something I honestly did not see coming any time soon. Reese Witherspoon and Ryan Phillippe announced that the couple is separating. There have been rumors of the couple separating for years, but now in it is official.

Their rep said, “We are saddened to announce that Reese and Ryan have decided to formally separate. They remain committed to their family and ask that you please respect their privacy and the safety of their children at this time.” If Reese and Ryan break up, who’s next?

Happier news, funnyman Jason Bateman and his wife Amanda had a baby girl on November 1 in Los Angeles. Even happier news: they gave her a normal name—Franchesca Nora Bateman. Congratulations to both of them.

Last week, it was announced by Nicole Richie’s publicist that she was entering a “diabetic management program” to help determine why she has a problem gaining weight. Her publicist made it clear that this was not rehab for an eating disorder. However, apparently this facility is in does not require her to live there, because she was seen and about in L.A. Saturday and Sunday night.

That will now be pushed back at least one week. Lastly, I’ll close this with yet another celeb breakup. After having the axe dropped on their relationship by Jay-Z, it appears as if he and Beyonce have ended their relationship.

His tweets say “I don’t think it’s meant to be. For she loves the work more than she does me. And honestly at 23 I would probably love my work more than I did she. So we ain’t it, me and her. Cuz what shall I say except that, And that’s where we differ, So I have to give her free time. Even if it hurts... The time’s now for her. At time she’ll mature, And maybe we can be, We can have a normal name--Franchesca Nora Bateman.

There hasn’t been an official statement from the couple as of yet, but there probably will be soon because it sounds like the end is here.

All-American Rejects Offer Outlook

We burned a couple of bridges and made a few directors hate us in the process, but in the end, ya know we won that dude an award so.

That's a good rule to have.

Opening this week are (we will) keep touring til the end of the year with The Tor, nado, which is our next tour, and maybe tour a little next year - maybe not. Maybe start working on the record right away, the new record, and real. That’s what the future holds!

And their future is certainly promising! After an amazing live performance here at Monmouth University, a successful college tour, and intense future plans laid out before them, the All-American Rejects are definitely on their way.

A Letter from the President

Run out... Line up... Be there...
...on Tuesday, November 7th to vote.

Why relegate all voting power to those twice and three times your age? Votes cast next week will affect policies for years and years. Since you will live with those policies longer than most of the people who do vote, why don’t you make your statement? Why don’t you show up at the polls?

You may not like the candidates...
You may not care for the current issues...
You can be a voting force, nonetheless...
...when the candidates recognize that you do vote, the issues will start to change.
...when your voting numbers become significant, candidates will court you.

...Please vote on Tuesday, November 7th.

I just finished writing a midterm reflection paper for my Washington Center advisor. I had to discuss what I’ve experienced so far in D.C. and what I’m getting out of the program. I thought about what a typical day here entails. Every day is pretty much the same. I wake up, get dressed, get on the Metro, and head off to work. Of course, I had a routine at Monmouth as well, but it varied at least a little bit every day. Here, I interact with the same people around my apartment and at work every day. On campus at Monmouth, I was constantly seeing different faces. I was even giving tours to complete strangers. I’m naturally a conversational person. Unfortunately, people here just aren’t that approachable.

I’m not saying it’s impossible to network here. There are plenty of opportunities to do so. Still, you take a big step when you go from living on a college campus to a big city like D.C. There’s no time to stop and talk; you have to keep moving. If you don’t, you will literally get run over. You push, you shove - whatever you have to do to get where you’re going. And most importantly, you never stand still on the left side of an escalator. That makes you what they call here an “escalator.” It’s like driving slow in the passing lane in Jersey. Unless you really enjoy seeing people freak out, you just don’t do it.

But you adapt to all this, and you learn a lot about yourself through the process. You find out what you’re really made of. This experience has made me an even more responsible and confident person than I was before. I know that even after I leave D.C. in mid-December, I’ll never forget what a valuable opportunity this has been.

Homecoming weekend at Monmouth was a lot of fun! I’m so glad that I finally got to see everyone. I’m happy to be back in D.C. knowing that everything is still the same there...even though I was only away for two months!

Delta Phi Epsilon

The sisters of Delta Phi Epsilon will be hosting their annual Lip Sync Tuesday, November 7th at 10 PM. It will be held in Pollak Theater and will be benefiting their Cystic Fibrosis philanthropy. All of the proceeds will be donated to a new foundation called “Tate’s Tote.”

On August 5, 2004, Tate Alan Goodge was born. Within 24 hours he was diagnosed with Cystic Fibrosis. Tate’s family is much larger than any one could’ve imagined; he was born into a family of Delta Phi Epsilon women – women who since 1959 have raised over 1 million dollars for Cystic Fibrosis. Tate’s Aunt Donna took oath as the International President just weeks before Tate’s birth.

The International sorority of Delta Phi Epsilon is now in the process of launching a new Philanthropy Event. With the help of many sponsors, the women of Delta Phi Epsilon will send totes filled with toys and other things to make the hospital stays more bearable.

Tickets will be sold prior to the event in the Student Center and in the Dining Hall.

So come help support this amazing cause with the sisters of Delta Phi Epsilon Tuesday, November 7th.

Phi Sigma Sigma

Phi Sigma Sigma has been very busy hosting & attending many events. We recently hosted Monmouth Idol which was very successful. Last week we held a late night Pancake Breakfast, and we would like to say thank you to all those who attended. It was a great night and we raised a lot of money for the National Kidney Foundation. We cant believe homecoming is already over, but it was yet another amazing one, and once again it was a day to remember. Coming up we have our date party and formal. We also have an alum pot luck dinner scheduled for the end of this month. Thank you so much to everyone who has attended our events and supported us!!

AST had tons of fun at homecoming! The alum were back in action. Founder’s Days is fast approaching! Happy 107th Birthday, AST! Riff- I hope you have a swift recovery after today’s tragic accident. PS Congrats on your new appropriately inappropriate named bundle of joy! Love, Matey. Congrats Alpha Rho’s on your new family trees! I love you special! <3 Fiona. Congrats to Pearl on mastering the two-step. Fiona, I love you! Wootback to Alpha Rho’s! Shimmmer, thanks for doing so much for the luncheon, I owe you! I have the best Big and Grand Big, Catalina and Lady! Peace out, Cyprus. Twinkle - Thanks for keeping me entertained all freaking weekend. Thanks to everyone who was so supportive last week! Love Spice. Homecoming was awesome even with the wind and rain. You girls made it amazing. <3 Shimmer. Thank you Lucky Star for listening to me complain about everything. And big thanks to my Big, Electra, for letting me borrow your monster truck to move my couch. And to Scky, Love Arcade on Thursday! I’m so excited! Love always, Cleo

Congrats to Pearl on mastering the two-step. Fiona, I love you! Wootback to Alpha Rho’s! Shimmmer, thanks for doing so much for the luncheon, I owe you! I have the best Big and Grand Big, Catalina and Lady! Peace out, Cyprus. Twinkle - Thanks for keeping me entertained all freaking weekend. Thanks to everyone who was so supportive last week! Love Spice. Homecoming was awesome even with the wind and rain. You girls made it amazing. <3 Shimmer. Thank you Lucky Star for listening to me complain about everything. And big thanks to my Big, Electra, for letting me borrow your monster truck to move my couch. And to Scky, Love Arcade on Thursday! I’m so excited! Love always, Cleo

Alpha Xi Delta

Hey everybody! We would like to thank everyone who helped us out during our first philanthropy event, Alex’s Lemonade Stand, held on October 19th. A big “congratulations” goes out to the new girls who have joined our organization through continuous open bidding. We are very excited to have you girls with us! We will be having our final round of COB events for the fall semester within the next couple of weeks, the first being November 7th with a tentative time of 8 o’clock, so log on to facebook.com and look at the group “Interested in Joining Alpha Xi Delta” for the latest info. We hope everyone had a great time at Homecoming and had a fun and safe Halloween! This Friday, the sisters will be having our fall sisterhood retreat, which we are very excited for. We hope everyone has a wonderful time during Family Weekend this weekend! We would also like to encourage everyone to come out for Delta Phi Epsilon’s Lip Sync competition on November 7th at 9pm in Pollack Theatre. A couple of our sisters will be performing, so come out and see us!

That is all for this week. Much Xi Love to all!!!

Today's Birthday (Nov. 1st)
This year is about taking care of others on a huge scale. You have the ability to solve their problems. Add faith and a strong intention.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries • (Mar. 21 - April 19) - Today is an 6
If you need extra cash to pay your bills, finish what you've started. Odds are good you'll discover a treasure you'd forgotten all about.

Taurus • (April 20 - May 20) - Today is a 9
Others are looking out for you, so relax and don't worry. Let your team do the work and somebody else drive the car. Relax.

Gemini • (May 21 - June 21) - Today is a 5
The way you'll get to the top is one step at a time. Don't think about how high the mountain is; think about what you're doing.

Cancer • (June 22 - July 22) - Today is a 10
Plan a special time to spend with the people and person you love. It might be far away, or in the privacy of your own home, whichever works for now.

Leo • (July 23- Aug. 22) - Today is a 5
You always like to get the best, and you find ways to afford it. This does not preclude getting a good deal. Put in the extra effort.

Virgo • (Aug 23 - Sept. 22) - Today is a 9
A person who, at first appears to be borderline crazy, actually has a good idea. Take notes and help achieve it.

Libra • (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23) - Today is a 5
You've been doing a lot of reading lately. Don't hide what you've discovered. Pass it along to a friend who can use it to get something good for you both.

Scorpio • (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21) - Today is a 10
You're a very powerful person, especially when you're in love. You can move mountains, and the odds are good you will.

Sagittarius • (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21) Today is an 4
Caution is required, as you tackle a difficult project. Don't be foolish, but don't be stopped, either. You and yours can do it.

Capricorn • (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) - Today is a 9
You've been doing a lot of reading lately. Don't hide what you've discovered. Pass it along to a friend who can use it to get something good for you both.

Aquarius • (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) Today is a 5
Sure, you can be wealthy and still be a good person. The one doesn't exclude the other at all. Be a role model for the masses.

Pisces • (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20) Today is a 9
You should be in a marvelous mood and full of great ideas. Write them down and make a list. This assignment is going to be fun. Don't wait to begin.

Freshmen: “Do you believe in college relationships?”

BY: SUZANNE GUARINO

No. College relationships put stress on both people. College is a time to find yourself… and a new guy?

Yes. It will be difficult though and both people have to realize that. A good relationship can work through it.

Yes, if both people want it to work, it can work! My boyfriend and I have been together for over a year and he went away to school last year and we made it.

Sure, but I doubt any girl would want to date a pathetic loser like me.

Yes, it’s hard at first but once you both realize that it is hard and you can & want to make it work – it can.

I definitely think the first year is about partying and meeting new people. After that, it’s possible.

Yes, I think college brings a lot of stress and responsibility but you care about someone it can work.

No. I have seen more than half of my good friends’ relationships fall apart because one goes to college and the other doesn’t or they go to different colleges and the relationships just becomes strained.

No, there are way too many girls here to have just one.

Running Past the Devils
Hawks come away with 19-13 win at Homecoming

The Hawks put together one of their signature lengthy drives. They converted two third downs and a fourth down to set up the offense again inside the 10-yard line. After three unsuccessful tries to go, including a David Sinisi touchdown called back due to holding, the field goal was up, and the Hawks were inside the 10-yard line. After the Weingart injury, it was Sean Dennis that drilled a 32-yard field goal to give the Hawks the 3-0 lead.

Midway through the fourth quarter, David Sinisi finally found the end zone from 5 yards out, for a Monmouth record-tying ninth straight week, to give the lead back to Monmouth. The Hawks have come away with 19-13 win at Homecoming.

Despite Lenny Brice’s fumble, as well as two other Hawks turnovers deep in Blue Devil territory in the first half, Monmouth was able to hold off Central Connecticut State’s explosive offense.

After forcing the Blue Devils to go three and out, Boland ran in from 16 yards out for the clinching score, capping off a seven-play, 55-yard drive. Central did manage to find the end zone one more time, but a 10-yard loss ran it, but it was too little, too late. The extra point was blocked, and the offense kicked off by the Hawks.

Three knees later, the Hawks had come away with a 19-13 win, to improve to 8-1 on the season, and 4-1 in NEC play. Monmouth is currently in a first place tie with Albany, Robert Morris, and Stony Brook. Monmouth now controls its destiny. If the Hawks can win their next two games, they will clinch a share of their fifth NEC title.

Boland finished 26 with 30, with 227 passing yards and a rushing touchdown. The Hawks rushed the best running team in the nation in NEC history to throw for over 7,000 yards. On the next play, Bob-Hawks went into the locker room down 7-3, led by Bric’s 98 yards, Boland’s 72, and Sinisi’s 65. Anthony Addonizio paced the defense with 7.5 tackles.

The Hawks defense continued to dominate its competition in their 19-13 win over Central Connecticut State. Monmouth’s front seven shut down the nation’s top runner, Justice Hairston, and kept the Blue Devil offense in check throughout the game.

that Monmouth University has ever faced,” coach Kevin Callahan said earlier in the week. The last five meetings between the Hawks and Blue Devils were decided by a touchdown or less, including Homecoming 2002, when Central crashed the party with a 10-9 win. But the Hawks answered back at Homecoming 2004 with a 46-voice victory on a last second field goal.

The weather conditions on this Homecoming day initially looked to favor the run game, as the day land called his own number and scrambled for a 30-yard gain that would have given the offense the ball inside the 10-yard line. But he, too, fumbled on the way down. And the fumble was again recovered by the Blue Devils.

Fox Sports NY cameras showed that Boland’s knee may have been down before the ball came loose, but the call stood. Once again, a great Monmouth scoring opportunity was taken away due to a turnover.

After the Hawks defense forced over claimed the fate of this scoring chance, as Boland was intercepted by Anthony Wilson.

Mommouth had one last opportunity before halftime with three minutes left to go, as a Boland screen pass to David Sinisi went for 56 yards and had the Hawks threatening inside the Blue Devil 10-yard line. But after three straight unsuccessful runs to get across the goal line, a Fred Weingart 24-yard field goal attempt was blocked, and for the second straight week, the Hawks went into the locker room 7-3.

Hawks already had.

On the first series of the second half, Hairston fumbled the football and it was recovered by Matt Hill, giving one of the turnovers back and giving the Hawks the football at the Central 42.

Fred Weingart broke the scoreless seal about five minutes into the quarter with a 21-yard field goal to give the Hawks a 3-0 lead. However, on the play, Weingart had to be helped off of the field due to a left leg injury, and his unavailability in a game that figured to be decided in the final seconds seemed to be significant.

With the ground game not working, Central started to open up the playbook just a bit more. It paid off when, midway through the third quarter, Blue Devils quarterback Ryan Holmes found Josh Vargas wide open for a 44-yard touchdown, giving Central a 7-3 lead.

To close out the third quarter, the Hawks put together one of their signature lengthy drives. They converted two third downs and a fourth down to set up the offense again inside the 10-yard line. After three unsuccessful tries to go, including a David Sinisi touchdown called back due to holding, the field goal was up, and the Hawks were inside the 10-yard line. After the Weingart injury, it was Sean Dennis that drilled a 32-yard field goal to give the Hawks the 3-0 lead.

Midway through the final stanza, David Sinisi finally found the end zone from 5 yards out, for a Monmouth record-tying ninth straight week, to give the lead back to Monmouth. The two-point conversion try was no good, but with a scoreless tie at the half.

Hairston was held in check, only rushing for 40 yards in the first half. The story was the many failed scoring opportunities the Hawks had climbed back into the driver’s seat, 12-7.

After forcing the Blue Devils to go three and out, Boland ran in from 16 yards out for the clinching...

Hawks Clinch Number One Seed in NEC Tournament

Tie FDU, Defeat Sacred Heart to Clinch Home Field Advantage

ALEXANDER TRUNCALE (SPORTS EDITOR)

The Monmouth University men’s soccer team clinched the number one seed in the Northeast Conference Tournament with a 1-0 victory over Sacred Heart. With the win, the Hawks will have home field advantage during the tournament.

Monmouth, ranked 15th in the nation, began the week in a tie with Fairleigh Dickinson University atop the NEC standings. Both squads were 6-0-1, setting up a huge matchup on Friday when the two squared off on the Great Lawn. The winner would emerge with a clear path to the all-important number one seed, and the loser would be on the outside looking in. Monmouth came in with its 17-game NEC unbeaten streak still alive, while FDU came in with an eight game streak.

Playing perhaps their most important game of the season, the Hawks were able to salvage a scoreless tie with FDU. The match was evenly played, as MU held a slim 10-9 advantage in shots.

The best scoring chance of the day for either side came in the 59th minute, when FDU’s Fab-...

Blue and White Secure Second Seed in NEC Tournament

Will Take on Central Connecticut on Friday

ERIC M. WALSH
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

For the first time in 12 games, the Monmouth University women's soccer team had to deal with the feeling of defeat. On Friday October 27th, the Hawks battled NEC co-leader Long Island University, but couldn't salvage a NEC co-leader Long Island University win.

Monmouth Hawks were playing the second seed in the NEC tournament 13-3-2 and earning the top spot away from the Hawks, surrendering just one, which helped LIU to victory. The Hawks had to rebound in order to secure second place in the NEC and they did well at Wagner on Sunday afternoon. Monmouth started the scoring early, with just under five minutes to go in the match to make the final score 3-1 and taking the advantage in corner kicks as well, 6-1.

“This was a solid victory after the emotional loss on Friday,” said MU head coach Krissy Turner. “Every one of our players contributed today to get us another road win.”

Women's Soccer Head Coach

For the one and only score of the match, Monmouth was outshot in the contest 9-6, and only got one shot on goal that required a save from Long Island University goalkeeper Stephanie Kansky. Katie Haffa made three saves in goal for the Hawks, surrendering just one, which helped LIU to victory.

The Hawks finish the regular season in second place in the Northeast Conference and look to take the NEC title as the No. 2 seed in the tournament, which will be held at Long Island University from November 3-5.

Monmouth will play the third-seeded Central Connecticut State Blue Devils at 1:30 p.m. on November 3, with the winner playing in the NEC championship game on November 5.

Blue and White Secure Second Seed in NEC Tournament

WILL TAKE ON CENTRAL CONNECTICUT ON FRIDAY

MICHAEL TIEDEMANN
STAFF WRITER

On what was a perfect fall day in the Bronx, N.Y., both the men's and women's cross country teams ran hard at the NEC Championships. This allowed for a second place finish for the men and a fourth place finish for the women.

For the men's side, their second place performance ties their best ever for the team. However, it wasn't enough, as one team ran faster last Friday, and that team was Quinnipiac.

“Quinnipiac has been the class of the conference all fall, but we were hoping to upset them,” Compagno said. “Though we did not get the win, our second place finish was our best in the last several years for the men and surely something to be proud of.”

The men were paced by All-NEC runner, Martin Suarez III, who ran the 5-mile course in a time of 26:12. This was good for fifth place and was also the third fastest time in Monmouth's history. “Martin ran a great race. He has worked for four years to earn an All-Conference spot and it is great to see him reach that goal,” Compagni said of his senior runner.

Along with Suarez, teammates Matt Caporaso, Dustin Coleman, Craig Segal, and Randy Haddor all finished within four seconds of each other to take 16th through 19th places in the race.

For the women, they duplicated last year's result by once again finishing fourth. The women were led by Malia Lyles who finished with a time of 19:39. Not far behind was freshman Cailin Lynam who, along with Suarez, had a record setting day.

Lynam now holds the fastest time for a freshman at Van Cortland Park. The previous record, which has stood since 1992, was previously held by Jenn Flood. That, of course, was until Lynam came in with a time of 19:45. Lynam was one of seven freshmen who ran for the women's team.

“The women's team had some strong efforts, but all of them knew they could have finished a few spots higher,” commented Compagni on how the women viewed their finish.

Looking ahead, Coach Compagni points to the two remaining championship meets as races where great things can be achieved.

“The NCAA Mid-Atlantic Regional [is] on Nov. 11, and the ECAC/KCA Championships [is] on Nov. 18. At both meets we can go after some of our highest finishes in school history.”
